

For our demo as of now, we have pure Javascript, HTML and CSS for the front end, however we plan to shift our front end to React for better resuability of components and for easier updating of elements in the DOM. Our back end is currently built in flask, we chose flask due to our proficiency in python and for its ease of deployment/development. In the future we may transition our backend to Node.js to keep the languages consistency between the front end and back end, but as of now flask seems the most useful to us.
